Survivors of the Expedition.

NEW YORK, May 10.—A dispatch from St. Johns, N. F., of May 9, says: The steamer Walrus arrived from the oil fishery at the port of St. Johns this morning, bringing news that the steamer Tigress had come into Roberts' Bay eighteen miles from here, having on board nineteen survivors of Hall's Arctic Expedition. The following are the names of the rescued: H. C. Tyson, assistant navigator; Frederick Meyer, meteorologist; John Heron, steward; W. C. Krugen, seaman; Frederick Jamka, seaman; William Windeman, seaman; Frederick Auting, seaman; Gustavus T. Linguist, seaman; Peter Johnston, seaman; William Jackson, cook; Esquimaux Joe, interpreter; Hannah and child, Esquimaux; Hans Christian, of Kane's Expedition; Hans Christian's wife and four children, the youngest only eight months old. This party, which had landed from the Polaris, was driven from her by a gale which burst her moorings, on the 15th of October, 1872, in latitude seventy-two degrees thirty-eight minutes.

When they first saw the Polaris she was under steam and canvass and making for a harbor on the east side of Northumberland Island. She had no boats left out of the six which she brought with her from the port of New York. Two were lost in the Northern Expedition, two were landed on the ice with Captain Tyson's party, one was burnt as firewood to make water for the crew, and the other is on board the Tigress.

The Polaris was in command of Captain Buddington, who had thirteen of the crew along with him and a plentiful stock of provisions. Her bow was somewhat damaged, and it is the opinion of the survivors that they will be unable to get clear until July, and even then, if the ship is unseaworthy, they should have to make new boats to effect an escape.

Death of Captain Hall.

On the 8th of October, 1871, in latitude eighty-one degrees thirty-eight minutes, and longitude seventy-two degrees forty-four minutes, Captain Hall died of apoplexy and was buried on shore, where they erected a wooden cross to mark his grave. He had recently returned from a northern sledge expedition, in which he attained a latitude of eighty-two degrees sixteen minutes. He seemed in his usual health, and had called the crew into the cabin, to encourage them with hopes of future rewards and to stimulate them to renewed exertion, when he was suddenly struck down and expired, to the great grief of those around, to whom he had endeared himself by his kindness and devotion.

The Polaris in Winter Quarters.

In September, 1871, the Polaris entered into winter quarters, and left them on August 12, 1872. The ice was then very heavy and set in a southern direction, and she was forced south, and so continued drifting till Captain Tyson and party were driven from her.

A sledge party crossed Kane's polar sea, which they pronounced to be a mere strait about fifteen miles wide. There was an appearance of open water to the north.

Sufferings of the Rescued.

The rescued party suffered very much during their dreary drift from hunger and cold. For the last two months they ate but few seal and polar bear as they could get. In fact, most by the Tigress they showed evident signs of their great sufferings, but during the nine days they have been on board they have improved vastly, and are now in bad health. The party is in charge of the United States Consul, and will arrive at St. Johns on Monday night.

Statement of Captain Tyson.

The following statement is furnished by Captain Tyson: On the 24th of August, 1871, we left Tessivask, and went through Smith's Sound. We succeeded in getting as far north as latitude eighty-two degrees sixteen minutes, when we returned and wintered at Polaris Bay, latitude eighty-one degrees thirty-eight minutes, longitude sixty-one degrees and forty-four minutes. We were frozen up until the 5th of September. On the 10th of October, Captain Hall started on a sledge journey north, and returned on the 24th, when he was taken sick and died on the 8th of November. He was buried on the 11th. The attack that carried him off was said to be apoplexy.

We passed the winter at Polaris Bay. On the 8th of June, 1872, we attempted to go north with two boats. We hauled our other boat on shore, and returned overland. On the 8th of July we started for home. On the 12th of August and on the 15th we were beset with ice in latitude eighty degrees. We drifted from there down to latitude seventy-seven degrees thirty-five minutes, when we encountered a heavy southwest gale, the ship being under a heavy pressure. On the night of the 15th we commenced landing provisions, &c., on the ice, the vessel being reported leaking very badly at times. We continued landing provisions for two or three hours. When the pressure ceased I went on board the vessel and asked the sailing-master if the vessel was making any more water than usual. He reported she was not. I then went to the pumps and ascertained that she was not making any more than she was doing in summer. I went on the ice again, and shortly after it began to crack and a few minutes afterwards broke in many places. The vessel broke from her fastenings and was soon lost to sight in the darkness and storm.

On the broken ice were most of our provisions to sustain the party through the winter, and seeing nothing of the vessel, we attempted to reach the shore in hopes of finding natives to assist us in living through the winter. Getting about half way to the shore with our heavily-laden boats, our progress became hard by the drifting ice, and I was compelled to halt once again. At this time I succeeded in saving fourteen cans of pemmican, eleven and a half bags of bread, ten dozen one and two pound cans meat and soup, fourteen hams, one small bag of chocolate weighing twenty pounds, some musk ox skins, a few blankets, a number of rifles and abundant ammunition.

In the morning, knowing that I had not provisions enough and other articles of food, clothing, compass, &c., on an abatement of the gale, I endeavored to shoot as many seals as possible, both for food, light and fuel, but could only get three, owing to bad weather having set in. I supposed the wind to be about southwest. On its clearing up I found myself about eight miles off what I supposed to be the east coast, and about thirty or forty miles below the ship. The ice being weak, I could not transport the boats and provisions to land until it grew stronger. While here I discovered my other boats, bread, &c., and saved them all. The ice grew firm, when I made another attempt to reach the shore, carrying everything in the boats and dragging them on their keel. The ice being exceedingly rough, we stove both boats.

We succeeded on the first of November in getting about half way to shore. Night came on us and very stormy weather set in. In the morning the ice was broken and we were drifting southward very fast. We saw no more land for many days. Bad weather continuing all though the month of November, we built a snow house and made as comfortable as we could. We were ten white men, two Esquimaux, two women and five children. We succeeded in killing a few seals, which furnished us with light and fuel with which to warm our scanty allowance of food through the darkness of the Arctic winter.

During the greater part of February we lived principally upon birds, and in March commenced to catch seals. Through that month we supported ourselves on bear and seal flesh, wasting neither skin nor entrails. We collected enough food in this way to last us until the middle of May, had we not been driven to sea by a strong westerly gale in the latter part of March, our "floe" piece being then reduced from five miles in circumference to about twenty yards in diameter. We left the piece on the 1st of April and abandoned nearly all our meat, a large amount of ammunition, clothing, skins, and other articles, taking a portion of meat in the boat, which we were obliged to throw overboard, on account of the boats being so deeply laden. I regained the outer edge of a piece of ice on the 3d of April, and succeeded in getting a little farther in.

On the 4th inst. a heavy northeast gale set in, a heavy sea running under the ice, which broke it in small pieces, so we had to live on a small piece. As we could not put our boat out, we could not find seals for food, and we were reduced almost to starvation. On the 31st of April we sighted a Polar bear. Every person was ordered to lie down and imitate the seal, while two Esquimaux secreted themselves behind a piece of ice, thus enticing the bear near enough to us to kill him. A few days after this we got our boat in the water, and worked our way west and southwest, and continued, at every opportunity, to work to the westward, in hopes of reaching the Labrador coast, and getting temporary relief. We were picked up by the steamship Tigress, Captain Bartlett, on the 30th of April, in latitude fifty-three degrees thirty-five minutes north, longitude fifty-five degrees west, or near Wolfe Island, and about forty miles from land.

The Polaris Without Boats.

The Polaris is now without boats, having lost two in trying to get north in the spring of 1872. The Tigress fell in with the party in a dense fog, and providentially struck the very floe on which they were, otherwise they must have perished. They all seem tolerably well.

Captain Tyson complained of swelled legs and feet, but nothing serious is the matter with him. When they left the Polaris all on board were in good health.

How the Party Got Separated from the Vessel.

In reference to the way in which the Polaris got away from the party which was rescued from off the ice, Captain Tyson states that he felt little anxiety at first, thinking she would soon come to their relief. I set my colors, he said, as she steamed along the shore, but the vessel was soon lost to sight in a bend of land and behind what I took to be Northumberland Island. The piece of ice I was on commenced drifting southward as the wind hauled to the northeast, opening a little way to the northeast of Northumberland Island. I saw a vessel in the harbor there. Her sails were furled, and no smoke was issuing from her smoke stack that I could see. I then attempted to bring my boats across the floe in an easterly direction, hoping to find water and reach the shore. I succeeded in dragging one boat across, and took the water and attempted to reach the shore some distance below the vessel. We were then drifting very fast, and the gale was blowing fresh with great violence from the northeast, and moving very fast and drifting. I was driven back on the ice again and compelled to haul my boat out. Night closed in on me and carried us to the southwest. In the morning we were about thirty miles southwest of where the ship went in the harbor. A heavy sea was running, which broke up my floe, a piece separating us from the six bags of bread and one boat. I saw the vessel under steam and canvas rounding a point to the northwest. Thinking she would come to our relief, I gave myself no anxiety. But soon we were doomed to disappointment, and from that time until the Tigress rescued us we never got a glimpse of the Polaris.

Disappointment of President Grant.

A dispatch from Washington says that the news of the disaster to the Polaris has affected the President deeply, as he had hoped the enterprise of the Government in this direction would redound to the national honor.

Officers and Crew of the Polaris.

The following is a correct list of the officers and crew of the ill-fated Polaris: C. F. Hall, Captain, of Cincinnati; Hubbard C. Chester, first mate, Noink, Connecticut; Sidney O. Buddington, sailing master, Groton, Connecticut; Wm. M. Morton, second mate, New Jersey; Emil Schuman, chief engineer, a native of Saxony, lived at Hoboken; Dr. Bessels, leader of the scientific corps, a native of Heidelberg, Prussia; Fred Meyer, meteorologist of the signal corps, Washington; J. Wilson, second engineer, a native of Scotland, lived in New York; Walter Campbell, fireman, a native of Scotland, a nephew of John Wilson; S. Bergren, fireman, a native of Hamburg; A. C. Tyson, ice pilot, Brooklyn; Charles Frust, cook, a native of Hamburg; John Porter, steward, a native of Scotland; Herman Eemons, a native of Prussia; Henry Hobby, a native of Prussia; Fred Antig, a native of Prussia; Wm. Jessup, a native of Hull, England; G. W. Dingwell, a native of Sweden; Joseph Mauch and J. W. C. Kruger, natives of Prussia; Peter Johnson, a native of Denmark; Esquimaux Joe, wife and child. Captain Hall leaves a wife and two children, daughter and son, who are living at Cincinnati. Emil Schumen, Chief Engineer, has a wife living in this city. Joseph Mauch, of the seamen, was a brother of the celebrated African traveler Mauch.

Dispatch from the United States Consul at St. Johns.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The following dispatch has been received by the State Department.

St. Johns, N. B., May 9.—Just returned from Bay Roberts, Captain Tyson reports having reached north latitude 82 degrees 16 minutes, and reached winter quarters in September, 1871, in latitude 81 degrees 8 minutes, longitude 61 degrees 44 minutes. Captain Hall died of apoplexy on the 8th of October, 1871. He was buried about half a mile southeast of the ship's winter quarters. We crossed Kane's Polar sea, said to be a strait, about fourteen miles wide, with the appearance of open water north. We left winter quarters on August 12th, 1872, and got on Swan ends on the 15th of the same month. Then drove south to 77 deg. 35 min. in the ship, when, owing to the heavy pressure of ice, the vessel was thrown up, and while landing stores, &c., the vessel broke away from her moorings with part of the crew, and drifted away. The vessel was last seen under steam and canvas, making for the harbor on the east side of Northumberland Island. The Polaris is without boats. Of the two landed on the ice with Captain Tyson, one was burnt to make water for the crew, and the other is now in Bay Roberts. The crew lost the 15th of October, 1872, and were picked up last April by the Tigress in latitude 53 deg. 30 min., having been one hundred and ninety-seven days on the ice. No lives were lost. When last on board the Polaris she made no more water than during the past winter and fall, but she had received heavy injuries to her stern, causing her to leak badly. The names of the crew here are Captain Tyson, Fred Omeyer, John Herron, W. K. Kruger, Fred Antig, Gustavus Linguist, Peter Johnson, William Jackson, Esquimaux Joe, Hannah and child, and Hans Christian of Dr. Kane's expedition, wife and four children, the youngest only eight months old. The Polaris is in charge of Captain Buddington. The crew have lived on a few ounces daily, and latterly on raw seal, eating the skins, entrails and all, for the past two months, and all are in fairly good health. Captain Tyson does not expect that the Polaris will get here before July, if in a condition to come home. There were fourteen left on board, with plenty of provisions. If the vessel be not fit to come home they can easily construct boats for their safety. All are provided for in Bay Roberts, and will come here on Monday.

U. S. Consul.

Dr. Hayes, the Arctic Explorer, Interviewed.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Dr. J. J. Hayes, the Arctic explorer, in an interview relative to the failure of the Hall expedition, expressed the opinion that the Polaris was unfit for the service, and that the injury to the vessel was caused by defects in her build. Captain Hall said the Doctor was four hundred and sixty-four miles from the North Pole. He (Hall) has proven what I have predicted long ago, that Smith's Sound was navigable and was the true passage into the open Polar sea, which he seems to have reached. Why he was driven back I cannot tell, probably by drifting ice fields or gales of wind. But I have no doubt that he had reached the Polar sea. There is one remarkable fact about his explanations—he had constant sunshine all the time, and the survivors, who were drifting down south, were all the time without a ray of sunshine. I can't understand why the ship, when it was so near Northumberland Island, would draw up before the ice and discharge its cargo on it. I think there was discension on board, and it looks as though this party had been determined to leave the ship. There is a mystery about this part of the report that I cannot fathom. I think Captain Hall has done a glorious thing. He has gone further to the north with his ship than any human being ever did before him, although others have gone as far in sledges. Captain Hall seems to have broken the icebergs of Smith's Sound, which baffled both previous expeditions, and succeeded in reaching a point between both Kane and I claimed to have seen the open Polar Sea, in latitude 82 degrees 16 minutes. The most northerly latitude ever reached by any ship (his ship) was two hundred and ninety-two miles further north than Kane's ship. I cannot understand why the survivors were left to the mercies of the floe unless there was difficulty on board the ship. At the outset, at Driscoe, there was some difficulty between Hall and Buddington. This was settled by the Captain of the Congress. There was something very mysterious in Captain Hall's death. I wouldn't like to say that he was killed by one of his men in a mutiny, but it would almost look so. I have never known of any one dying in that region of apoplexy, and Captain Hall certainly did not look like an apoplectic man. I think there is a strong probability that the people on board the Polaris are safe and that the vessel will be back here by September. The men who deserted the ship probably did so because of Hall's death. He was a brave and resolute man, and set out with a determination to reach the North Pole if it would take him five years to do it. He was one of the greatest men I ever saw, and would certainly have stayed two years more to accomplish his purpose if death had spared him—death or murder, I don't know which.

Professor Baird, of the Smithsonian Institute, in Washington, thinks that the Hall expedition is far from a failure, and has no doubt it realized many of the objects in view in sending it out.

Sketch of Captain Hall's Life.

Captain C. F. Hall was born in Berkshire county, Massachusetts. He was about five feet eight inches in height, with a compact, firmly knit frame, indicative of great vigor and strength, and weighed probably about one hundred and ninety pounds. He had a large head, with a profusion of thick, brown hair and heavy brown beard, inclining to curl. His forehead was broad and massive, with a full development of the temporal and coronal regions. His eyes were blue and the whole expression of the countenance firm, but very agreeable, and pleasant. He was about fifty-eight years of age. About the year 1850 he went to Cincinnati, and within a year bought the business of Benjamin True, who was engaged in the manufacture of seal presses. The business of Capt. Hall continued for some years successfully until 1857, when the laying of the first Atlantic cable fired his enthusiastic temperament and led him to hail that achievement in having the first telegram that passed over the ocean printed on slips and thrown broadcast throughout the city. He next, at the suggestion of John D. Caldwell, and in partnership with that gentleman, established a small paper called the Occasional, which derived its income from advertisements solely, and was to be printed more especially to herald the triumphs of the Atlantic cable. Captain Hall believed that the newspapers of the day did not give sufficient prominence to the work. With Mr. Caldwell he next established the Cincinnati Express, a penny paper, which started out with every prospect of success, but Arctic exploration visions were busy with Capt. Hall's brain, and the Express failed. During this time he had read and studied everything that related to the North Pole. He went at that project with that enthusiastic energy which has marked his whole life. He was, in every sense of the word, an enthusiast, and dreamed of his plans night and day, even going to the extent of subjecting himself to the test of cold, by coming out on Mount Adams. In his earlier years he was a blacksmith, working at the forge, and his robust development, beyond question, was in some measure attributable to the exercise of that ardent occupation. He was in no wise a scientific or highly educated man, but had a remarkably practical mind, with a great deal of force of character. He had never studied the science of navigation even, though he was, through experience and aptitude, as competent to navigate a ship or conduct an overland exploring expedition as any of the daring band of discoverers that had endeavored to solve the great Arctic problem. He sailed northward in 1860 in search of Sir John Franklin, since which time his name and fame have been the common property of the world. Captain Hall left Cincinnati in May, 1871, for his third voyage to the Arctic regions, and died the November following. He leaves a wife and two children, a boy and girl, the latter about fifteen years of age. Mrs. Hall left for New York on Friday last.

Funeral Obsequies of Chief Justice Chase.

Testimonials of Respect by Sorrowing Friends.

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Hall.

A Glowing Tribute to the Dead Jurist.

NEW YORK, May 10, 1873.

Funeral Obsequies of Chief Justice Chase.

From the time the doors of the church were closed, at one o'clock, till reopened to admit the public to the funeral service, the sexton and undertaker and assistants were busy perfecting arrangements. At half-past two the public were admitted, and soon the portion of the sacred edifice set apart for them was filled. At three, after a voluntary by the organist, the solemn procession entered the middle door and moved down the centre aisle in the following order: Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, meanwhile reading from the ritual the service prepared from the ceremony of "I am the resurrection and the life." "He that believed in me, though dead, shall live," and "I know that my Redeemer liveth!" Rev. Dr. Tyng and Rev. Dr. Hall, clergymen from this and neighboring stations; pall-bearers, Hamilton Fish, Irwin McDowell, Wm. Sherman, Gerritt Smith, Wm. Cullen Bryant, Mayor Havemeyer, Gideon Welles, Hiram Ramey, Wm. M. Evarts, John J. Cisco, Charles O'Conner, Whitelaw Reid; members of the family; Judges, Governors, Senators, Congressmen, officers of the army and navy, delegates from social, literary and political organizations.

The casket was then placed on the dais, the pall-bearers seating themselves on the right and left of the chancel. A beautiful floral basket and a large floral cross were placed upon it, while at each end stood a broken column composed of tuberoses, immortelles and other appropriate flowers. One at the foot was crowned with violets, but these were only a small part of the floral gifts by which friends and admirers of the deceased and statesman sought to express their sorrow and sympathy.

On the platform within the chancel stood baskets of wreaths and crosses of many sizes and exquisite workmanship, some with cards attached, bearing the name of the giver, and others with no mark upon them to show from whom they came, but all bearing with their perfume a silent tribute of respect for the good and useful life now ended. One of these unnamed tributes, a large and beautiful cross, was ascertained to have been sent by General McDowell. Perhaps the most touching of these testimonials to the departed worth, because the most simple and ostentatious, were the little bouquets consisting of a single white rose, or rose and violet entwined, which were scattered here and there upon the chancel steps. There was a large cross presented by Mr. Arthur Leary, another by A. C. Fahnestock, a splendid flower basket by Mrs. Sweeny, and another by Mrs. Swayne, and another by Whitelaw Reid, a cross by F. Tillinghast and a star by General Butterfield.

When the pall-bearers had taken their seats on either side of the chancel, Rev. Dr. Tyng read the beautiful Episcopal service for the dead.

Rev. Dr. Hall then preached the funeral sermon, as follows: "All flesh is grass, and all the glory of man as a flower of the grass. The grass withereth and the flower thereof falleth away, but the word of the Lord endureth forever." So the myrtle voice continued to cry, and the mournful strain with its one note of hope, Peter renews seven centuries later. It has been sounding through the world ever since. We listen to it here to-day. The flower thereof falleth away, but the word of the Lord endureth forever. To make this word of the Lord heard among the symbols of universal decay, to fix the attention on what is abiding and solid, while men are humbled by a fresh sense of earthly uncertainties, and to turn the current of grief for private loss and public calamity into channels of faith, this appears to me the main purpose of these funeral solemnities. There was a time when there was great propriety in reciting over the grave the notable deeds and striking characteristics of public men. There were but few facilities for erecting memorials over virtues that ought to remember, and forever, the tribute which is due to great worth, and there were few outlets for the tide of human feeling, whether of admiration for the illustrious dead. But it is no longer. General feeling on such events is now expressed more fully, more promptly, and to a wider audience by the press. But it is not unfitting that religion should make it apparent that her eye is on all true public spirits, that her heart beats responsive to all genuine patriotic feeling, and that Christians, like good men of the elder dispensation, seek the peace of the city and of the land in which they dwell, and it ought to be encouraging to all honest public men, to all who are trying to be just in their administration, that the removal of Chief Justice Chase has brought to him so much appreciation from the country, approbation spontaneous and universal. The highest and purest civilization is moulded on the principle which the Divine master embodied in his words, that he, the greatest among you shall be your servant. The acknowledged greatness of him whom we bury rests on his personal worth and public services, his only title that of high and well-deserved place in his chosen profession. It pleased God to call him to duties of the gravest and most momentous kind, as advocate, as Governor, as Senator, as financial minister, as Chief Justice. Nowhere has there been a failure, and in some departments his efforts have been crowned with conspicuous and unprecedented success—unprecedented in the most literal way; for when he was appointed by Mr. Lincoln to order the finances of the nation so confused and in many respects imperilled as was ours when he took the Treasury Department in his firm hand, and carried the nation through the great struggle? And even when the vast machinery of war was consuming $3,000,000 a day he never faltered in his course. How well the work was done history has already told, and history will continue to tell. Thankful men will more highly appreciate the colossal results he then achieved as the years roll away and they are enabled to seek its effects in their local surroundings. Associated with Lincoln and Seward and Chase, what brave soldiers they were in the cause of human liberty! What a work they accomplished in the great rebellion, from the effects of which we have just recovered! A war only secondary in importance to that great struggle which took place a hundred years ago, when the people flung themselves into the strife an unorganized mass of colonists, but came out of it a strong and recognized nation! He who reads aright to the future the progress of the our later, and in many respects greater, war, will not omit the name of him whose bold body now lies before us. In the face of misapprehension and intrigue and clamor he curbed and guided the blind energies of the Commonwealth until it came out triumphant and free. But why should I recount to you that of which yourselves are been intimately conversant? Rather let me speak to you, my beloved brethern, of that which is of vital and transcendent interest to us all—of Christianity. When I stood, last Tuesday night, by the bed of Chief Justice Chase; when I looked on that broad brow and massive brain, and thought of the mighty interest with which it had worked for the oppressed; when I looked at that great heaving bosom, and thought how he had been weighed down by many cares on his mind for the public good, I could not help thinking how much alone he is now, how insecurable to any power but the power of Him who made him. Of all the hearts on earth that loved him, it was not possible for one to make to him a demonstration of their sympathy, and the one thing which could then give him any comfort was that he had trusted in Jesus Christ, and rested upon the promises of the God of mercy. He accepted, as the strongest and the most opulent may accept, as the poorest and meanest may accept, as you and I should accept, the forgiveness of sins that comes through the blood of Christ, and he was then enjoying the rest and peace that comes through Jesus Christ our Lord. These sudden afflictions seem to me to be peculiarly suggestive. When the illustrious are taken from us we dwell with delight upon all the good there is in them; that is, good as far as it goes. But can we not allow to fall upon their living ear some of that generous appreciation and applause which we are so willing to give them after they can hear us no more? Let us be generous and just to those who serve us in difficult and elevated positions. It is easy enough for us, who are in the quiet of private life, to look upon and censure the movements of those who are climbing the rugged Alpine steeps. But our eyes can only very imperfectly take in the vast depth of the crevasses which they have to cross. Do let us, for once, come to the living with a word more to those who weep here to-day, whose sorrow is the sorrow of the living. Be thankful that the career of one who was so justly dear to you has closed without his character being stained by a single wicked reproach. Be thankful, still more, for the just trust that is in your hearts, that he for whom you weep was a Christian man, resting on the Savior and looking to him with love. Try to imitate his virtues, live as he did, love as he loved, serve as he served, and be Christian as he was, and it will be well for you in this life and that which is to come.

The Atlantic National Bank.

The Comptroller of the Currency has ordered that no dividends be made by the Atlantic National Bank until the liabilities are fully ascertained. It is stated that a note for thirty thousand dollars was found among the assets of the bank, drawn by Southworth, the President, and discontinued a few weeks ago. Some mining stock deposited as security is said to be worthless. A similar note drawn by a director and endorsed by the President has also been found, and the collateral deposited to redeem it. Among the alleged doubtful assets is a note for $8,000 drawn by the notary of the bank, and said to be running under renewals several years.

At the conclusion of the services the congregation slowly dispersed. Subsequently the remains were taken charge of by Messrs. R. C. Parsons, O. J. Middleton, M. B. Field and D. Wallace, and conveyed to the Jersey City depot, whence they were taken to Washington on the 9 P. M. train.

Return of an Absconder.

Henry K. Conklin, the absconding Secretary of the Market Savings Bank, has returned to the city under promise of immunity from prosecution, to testify in the pending railroad suits. He says George Bell is the man who accompanied him to Canada and robbed him of three thousand dollars. He expressed surprise at finding Vaneman, the President of the bank, in prison, and announced his determination to effect his release.

Tweed's Case to Come up in Court To-day.

The District Attorney has served notices on the counsel for William M. Tweed that his case would be called for trial on Monday. This is the famous case in which the jury disagreed some months ago. The counsel for Tweed met on Saturday to consult and prepare for his defence. One reason for the action of the District Attorney is the failure of the bill in the Legislature to extend the time in which cases of the nature of Tweed's became outlawed.

The Labor Question.

The Brooklyn gas men, failing to get an advance to $3.75 a day and a guarantee of its payment for a year, quit work to-day. Germans were already employed to take the places of the strikers.

Attempt to Assassinate Emperor William in Russia.

LONDON, May 12.—The London Telegraph to-day contains a report that an attempt was made to assassinate Emperor William of Germany while he was holding a review at Justerberg. Burns, that is, the greatest among you shall be your servant. The acknowledged greatness of him whom we bury rests on his personal worth and public services, his only title that of high and well-deserved place in his chosen profession. It pleased God to call him to duties of the gravest and most momentous kind, as advocate, as Governor, as Senator, as financial minister, as Chief Justice. Nowhere has there been a failure, and in some departments his efforts have been crowned with conspicuous and unprecedented success—unprecedented in the most literal way; for when he was appointed by Mr. Lincoln to order the finances of the nation so confused and in many respects imperilled as was ours when he took the Treasury Department in his firm hand, and carried the nation through the great struggle? And even when the vast machinery of war was consuming $3,000,000 a day he never faltered in his course. How well the work was done history has already told, and history will continue to tell. Thankful men will more highly appreciate the colossal results he then achieved as the years roll away and they are enabled to seek its effects in their local surroundings. Associated with Lincoln and Seward and Chase, what brave soldiers they were in the cause of human liberty! What a work they accomplished in the great rebellion, from the effects of which we have just recovered! A war only secondary in importance to that great struggle which took place a hundred years ago, when the people flung themselves into the strife an unorganized mass of colonists, but came out of it a strong and recognized nation! He who reads aright to the future the progress of the our later, and in many respects greater, war, will not omit the name of him whose bold body now lies before us. In the face of misapprehension and intrigue and clamor he curbed and guided the blind energies of the Commonwealth until it came out triumphant and free. But why should I recount to you that of which yourselves are been intimately conversant? Rather let me speak to you, my beloved brethern, of that which is of vital and transcendent interest to us all—of Christianity. When I stood, last Tuesday night, by the bed of Chief Justice Chase; when I looked on that broad brow and massive brain, and thought of the mighty interest with which it had worked for the oppressed; when I looked at that great heaving bosom, and thought how he had been weighed down by many cares on his mind for the public good, I could not help thinking how much alone he is now, how insecurable to any power but the power of Him who made him. Of all the hearts on earth that loved him, it was not possible for one to make to him a demonstration of their sympathy, and the one thing which could then give him any comfort was that he had trusted in Jesus Christ, and rested upon the promises of the God of mercy. He accepted, as the strongest and the most opulent may accept, as the poorest and meanest may accept, as you and I should accept, the forgiveness of sins that comes through the blood of Christ, and he was then enjoying the rest and peace that comes through Jesus Christ our Lord. These sudden afflictions seem to me to be peculiarly suggestive. When the illustrious are taken from us we dwell with delight upon all the good there is in them; that is, good as far as it goes. But can we not allow to fall upon their living ear some of that generous appreciation and applause which we are so willing to give them after they can hear us no more? Let us be generous and just to those who serve us in difficult and elevated positions. It is easy enough for us, who are in the quiet of private life, to look upon and censure the movements of those who are climbing the rugged Alpine steeps. But our eyes can only very imperfectly take in the vast depth of the crevasses which they have to cross. Do let us, for once, come to the living with a word more to those who weep here to-day, whose sorrow is the sorrow of the living. Be thankful that the career of one who was so justly dear to you has closed without his character being stained by a single wicked reproach. Be thankful, still more, for the just trust that is in your hearts, that he for whom you weep was a Christian man, resting on the Savior and looking to him with love. Try to imitate his virtues, live as he did, love as he loved, serve as he served, and be Christian as he was, and it will be well for you in this life and that which is to come.

The Atlantic National Bank.

The Comptroller of the Currency has ordered that no dividends be made by the Atlantic National Bank until the liabilities are fully ascertained. It is stated that a note for thirty thousand dollars was found among the assets of the bank, drawn by Southworth, the President, and discontinued a few weeks ago. Some mining stock deposited as security is said to be worthless. A similar note drawn by a director and endorsed by the President has also been found, and the collateral deposited to redeem it.

Revolting Murder and Suicide.

ATCHISON, Ks., May 10.—A special to the Daily Champion from Wetmore, a small town on the Central Branch Railroad, forty miles from here, gives an account of a revolting wholesale murder. It appears that a man named James Errickson was arrested some time ago charged with rape on the wife of a man named Marquette. All the parties are Swedes. Errickson was acquitted and left the place. Yesterday he came back to Wetmore, and this morning went to Marquette's house, in the town, and found the latter came to the door Errickson shot him in the breast, killing him instantly. He took Marquette's two small children in with the door of a neighbor's house, where he left them, saying he had killed their father and was going back to kill their mother. The alarm was soon given and the neighbors rushed to the scene of the murder, but it was reported they feared to go to the house, and sent to Wetmore for assistance. Before it arrived they heard shots inside. On entering the house they found Mrs. Marquette lying on the bed, in a state of nudity, and shot in seven places. Errickson was lying across her body, also dead, shot in two places, one over the temple and one in the abdomen. He still held a pistol in his hand, and he had, it seems, committed rape on the woman before killing her, and then shot himself.

KANSAS, May 10.—The Cherry Vale excitement is still at fever heat, the Times has specials to-night which give the following additional particulars: A force of about one hundred men is at the grounds of the slaughter, which is being plowed over again, though no more graves have been found. The Rowland family, of Ladore, seven miles from the slaughter, consisting of the old man and his wife, his son Hod and wife, a Stephenson, Jno. Barnes and wife, and Thos. Lyke and wife and daughter, have been arrested. M. King, a travelling district preacher, has been arrested at Parsons, and a notorious murderer once pardoned from the penitentiary named Major Munford, and a woman with him, were arrested at Pt. Scott. The detectives are still out, but rumors are so contradictory that no reliance is to be placed on them. The Bender house and furniture are being demolished by visitors, who are carrying a portion of it away as relics.

The Constitutional Convention.

Progress of the Judiciary Article.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9, 1873.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON'S SESSION.

At the afternoon session of the Constitutional Convention the eighth section of the Judiciary article was adopted as follows:

Said Courts in Philadelphia and the county of Allegheny, respectively, shall, from time to time, in turn, detail one or more of its Judges to hold the Criminal Courts of said district in such manner as may be directed by law.

Judge Woodward offered and advocated a section for the establishment in counties of one hundred thousand population, of Courts of Probate, consisting of one or more judges, to take the place of the Orphans' Courts, Registers' Courts, and office of Register of Wills. It also provided for auditing of accounts filed in said Courts by the Judges and clerks thereof, without expense to the parties, except where all parties in interest in a pending proceeding should nominate an auditor, whom the court may, in its discretion, appoint, and in such case the auditor's fees shall be paid by the parties.

The section was finally withdrawn.

A portion of the article relating to the jurisdiction of the Court of Common Pleas was then proceeded with, when the following section was passed:

Section 9. Every Judge of the Court of Common Pleas shall, by virtue of his office, and within his district, be a Justice of the Oyer and Terminer, general jail delivery, and the

A MOTION for the establishment of reciprocal trade with the Sandwich Islands has been made in the Canadian Parliament, in the hope that by some such legislation the growing commerce of the United States in that quarter may be subverted.

THE steamship Egypt brought to New York one hundred farmers and mechanics from Yorkshire, England, who have purchased land in Clay county, Minnesota, on the line of the Western Pacific Railroad. Sixty Polanders are now on their way to the same State.

THE recent heavy decrease in the bullion of the Bank of England is referable, in view of what is said by the London Economist, to a preparation on the part of the Government of Great Britain to pay the United States the Alabama indemnity money, amounting to £3,200,000 ($16,000,000), which becomes due before the 1st of October next.

THE steamer "Pennsylvania," whose completion and proposed trial trip was noticed in these columns, has returned to Philadelphia, her trip being in every respect a perfect success. Her speed averaged about thirteen miles an hour, and on the Delaware reached seventeen miles an hour, and her consumption of coal was only about thirty tons a day. She will sail, on her first regular trip to Europe, on the 22d of May.

IT IS STATED that the papers left by Oakes Ames contain a full refutation of the story that he perjured himself in order to convict certain Congressmen of Credit Mobilier operations. Further than this, that they contain a full disclosure of the history of that affair, involving others than those whose names were mentioned. Should these papers be given to the public, there will be a lively flutter among certain interested parties.

THE New York Times makes a good point against the Farmers' National Convention when it says that it will fail in influence because of its lack of precise information. The discussions and resolutions gave nothing definite other than what they wished. There were no facts or data of any kind upon which to base a reasonable judgment of the value of their demands. In our view even the demand for new railroads was unreasonable, as involving government aid. The laws of trade must regulate, so far as railroads are concerned.

THERE is a good deal of sense in Brigham Young's reported opinion on the Indian question. Nothing could exceed the folly of most of the action of the United States toward the Indians previous to 1869. The policy since adopted has been temporarily discredited by the disastrous experience with the Modocs. But it is now generally conceded that the Modoc business had no direct bearing on what is known as the "peace policy." Meanwhile it is pleasant to hear that the considerable tribe of Snake Piutes have volunteered to take the war-path against the Modocs.

THE ILLNESS of Pope Pius IX. has given rise to much discussion relative to the Popes, their choice, mottoes and predictions peculiar to each, and much else interesting and uninteresting. The motto applied to the present Pope is the origin of the idea, somewhat prevalent, that the present will prove the last of the Popes. The present Pope is quite popular, personally, but there is evidently an under current of fear relative to his successor, a fact which has much to do with the anxiety prevailing relative to the election of his successor.

WE HAVE insisted, as a feature of the discussion relative to cheap freight rates, that there should be discrimination observed. For example there are railroads which do not overcharge, and others that do. The New York Evening Post torches one phase of the question very appropriately in the following remarks: "Unquestionably among the truisms may be safely reckoned the wonderful results achieved by railroads within the memory of men not yet past middle age. It is a safe question for discussion, and might prove a profitable one, whether, after all, there has not been much wisdom as well as much energy and much capital required and used in bringing about such results. Many abuses have grown up at the same time; here is a power confronting us the growth of which, if not wisely directed and governed, is alarming, and may prove disastrous. But, nevertheless, it is a pertinent question, How came it here and what has it done, as well as what does it not do?"

LOUISIANA affairs continue to attract very considerable attention. The use of United States troops will alone prevent a general outbreak of civil war, the end of which no one would be able to foresee. While Kellogg's lack of energy is partially responsible for the situation, it affords no excuse for those who persist in calling themselves the respectable people, and yet who have omitted no opportunity to aid in the McEnery faction, even when they have not directly participated in their unlawful proceedings. These persons have forwarded supplies of provisions to the "Resisters," and in various ways have encouraged the rebellion. While we can readily imagine that Kellogg has feared lest the State courts would not sustain him in any action he might take against those in practical rebellion against his authority, he still should have arrested them, thus preventing any vigorous movement against his own authority. As affairs now look, something like armed neutrality is the best condition of things that can be looked for until a new election can be had.

THOMAS SCOTT, a reputable grain statistician, estimates that there will be an unusual deficiency in the next harvest in England. He claims that one-fifth less land is in wheat this year than last, and that on this the production will be deficient in quantity and quality. He makes a similar computation in relation to barley. The total value of the food importations of Great Britain in 1871 amounted to $308,640,000, and in 1872 to $338,185,000, an increase of $34,545,000 in one year. The food imports for the current year may be estimated at not less than $450,000,000, an increase in round numbers of $150,000,000 compared with three years ago. [illegible] unfavorable prospects of the harvest and no hopes of a decrease in the [illegible] will go far to counterbalance a favorable harvest in 1874. It is believed that England will afford a market for $400,000,000 of breadstuffs yearly for several years to come. With water transportation established, we may compete with Russia in this market.

FREDERICK FRALEY has been elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Centennial Board of Finance. Mr. Fraley is a gentleman of large experience and ability, and extensively known to the business men of the principal cities of the United States, by reason of his repeated service as President of the National Board of Trade, composed of the commercial and mercantile organizations of the various trade centres of the whole country. The official front now presented by the Centennial Board can hardly fail to be recognized as an exceedingly strong one. The President is John Welsh; the Vice Presidents William Sellors and William H. Appleton, of New York, and the Secretary and Treasurer, Frederick Fraley. It would be difficult to improve upon this as an organization designed to secure the public confidence.

OUR ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

Our readers will remember that two years ago, an expedition was fitted out, at the expense, chiefly of the Government, and placed in command of Dr. Hall, an experienced Arctic explorer, with instructions to proceed to the Arctic regions, on a voyage of discovery. Much confidence was felt in the success of the expedition. The Polaris, the steamer provided, was specially fitted up for the work she was expected to do. She had boilers constructed for using seal fat for fuel, and was strengthened, and in several ways fitted for her peculiar mission. In provisioning her, the same care was observed, condensed vegetables being largely supplied, in order to guard against scurvy. Thus fitted out, she was expected to brave successfully the perils of the Northern sea, and it was hoped, force her way to the open sea, discovered by Kane.

The intelligence we publish this morning, however, sets at rest all the hopes entertained. The story, in brief, is this: A party, led by Dr. Hall made a sledge journey to Kane's Polar sea, which they found to be but a strait, and on their return, were separated from the Polaris by a gale, and were unable to again get on board. In November, Dr. Hall died of apoplexy. The others, after floating about on the ice for a long time, were finally rescued by the steamer Tigress. At one time, while floating on the ice, they saw the Polaris under sail and steam, but were not observed by those on board. Thus, it may be said, ends the expedition from which so much was hoped.

Dr. Hall was an experienced explorer, having been with Kane in his expedition to the Arctic seas. He was an enthusiast in matters of Arctic discovery, and has finally given his life to the cause he had so much at heart. Much was expected from this last enterprise, and its sad end will carry sorrow to the hearts of all interested in the success of a hopeful enterprise.

VIOLATING PROPERTY RIGHTS.

A subject will come up in Councils today, in behalf of which we bespeak the earnest and candid attention of its members. It involves questions of property right which should be maturely considered before final action is taken. It is that of prematurely opening streets before the growth of the city demands it, in order to accommodate speculations. It involves the question whether one citizen can have property rights paramount to those of another. Let us state a case in point. Some time since, what is known as the Linden Park Association, purchased land a short distance from Fifth avenue, and back of Oakland. It is now proposed to put this property on the market; and in doing so, it is thought that the sales will be made to better advantage, if an avenue is opened to the property to be sold, through that owned by Messrs. Waring and Childs.

The only possible benefit is in enabling the possessors of Linden Park to advertise it more attractively, and possibly to sell it more advantageously. We submit, is it just, or wise, prudent or fair, to allow the property of one citizen to be cut up, sim-ply for the purpose of benefiting another? If so, who will be secure? If it may be done in the outer wards, may it not be done in the city proper? And if it may be done to gratify the desire for gain, may it not be done to gratify a desire for revenge? If so, who is safe against despoilment and loss? We are not opposed to the success of the Linden Park project; on the contrary, we wish it well; but it is palpably unjust that its success should be secured at the expense of other property holders.

These things, which have been done under the forms of law, if they be consummated, will have a tendency to unsettle values in all the suburban wards, if not the entire city. Linden Park, the property to be benefited, can be approached, either from the city or Oakland, quite as conveniently by means of avenues now open, as it can be by opening a street through Messrs. Waring and Childs' property. Yet despite this fact that the property owners along the proposed new avenue protest against the opening, an ordinance was forced through Councils, to have it done. The Street Committee, under a threat of prosecution, proceeded to open the street, and in completing their work, must destroy a large number of valuable shade trees, beside destroying fences, and exposing valuable properties to damage. If the street were immediately needed, or could it be graded forthwith, there might be some excuse for this wantonness. But, inasmuch as the property holders are opposed to the opening, it cannot be graded at all, until an act is passed by the Assembly next winter, to empower it. Thus, in a spirit of mere wantonness, or spite, a street is opened through valuable properties, at a time when it cannot be used, and when the only effect of its opening is to injure valuable property, for the prospective benefit of a speculation. Out of these cases comes a question of equity, that ought to be very fully considered. It is, shall individuals be allowed to carry forward their schemes of speculation, at the expense of others. It is not a question whether streets are needed for the development and improvement of the city. When the city has so far grown as to require, for the convenience of the public, the opening of streets and avenues, it then becomes a public question, and should be treated as such. In such an event, there is no question for debate,—the public necessities are paramount, and must be respected. But even these do not invalidate private rights. When property is taken, under the pressure of public necessity, viewers are appointed, and the damages estimated and paid. But when the sole consideration in opening a new street or avenue, is that of benefiting a speculator, or a body of speculators, we submit that there is no good reason for acting at all. It is merely a question, whether one property shall be benefited at the expense of another. We say not. Further than this, we hold that a rule should be provided, assessing the damages for such openings against the party to be benefited. Were a suit brought against the city, in a case of this kind, it will be sure to establish a precedent. It is certainly a matter of equity, and, we think, of law, that before taking property for public uses, there shall be made out a case of public need. But where property is seized, and streets opened through it, merely to enable some one else to make money, we believe there is ground for an action for damages against the city. This aside, and we ask, are the speculators among us of so much more value than other citizens, that Councils must so constantly accommodate their wishes?

EVERY kind of new advice has been suggested for subduing the Modocs. Some want blood hounds, some men in armor, some other Indians. It remains for this city to suggest a mode at once humane and efficacious. It is not original, for we get the idea from the opera of the Grand Duchess. It is this: Put about forty gallons of whisky, in demijohns, around the particular Lava Bed where the Modocs are ensconced. On the day following advance and easily capture every one of them.—Philadelphia Age.

THE first anniversary of the marriage of Lord Bute was celebrated in high feather at Rothesay recently. On the arrival of the wedded pair in the island after their marriage, it is to be remembered that the noble pair were invalided, and could not accept of any public entertainment on that occasion; it was, therefore, resolved to celebrate the anniversary of their nuptials in this manner. A large company assembled, and the spacious hall of the Bute Hotel was tastefully decorated with flags and evergreens, and at one end a beautiful transparency of the Bute and Howard arms presented a very fine appearance.

A CONTEMPORARY, apropos of cheap freight conventions, tells of the manner in which a Michigan farmer obtained his cheap freight. He raised a heavy corn crop, but the railway charges for carrying it to market took all the profit. So he fed his corn to hogs and cattle, selling very little, and got his cheap freight by pouring the corn into condensing bags of hogskin and cowhide, that held many times more than canvass bags of the same size. These "condensing bags" went to market "on the hoof," without the railway freight swallowing up all the profit, and herein is found the solution of what is often a vexatious agricultural problem.

LORD ERSKINE, according to Rogers, was, next to Sydney Smith, the wittiest man he ever knew. To all letters soliciting his "subscription," Erskine had one form of reply. Writing a coarse hand, with lines widely apart, he said: "Sir, I feel much honored by your application to me, and I beg to subscribe —here the reader had to turn over the leaf—"myself your very obedient servant." He once said, very seriously, "Rogers, when the hour comes that all secrets shall be revealed, we shall know the reason why—shoes are always made too tight." And when some one had remarked that Lord Mahon had died worth two hundred thousand pounds, Erskine said: "Well, that's a very pretty sum to begin the next world with."

A VIENNA correspondent writes as follows respecting a young lady who is pleasantly remembered: "Miss Minnie Hauck took her leave of the Imperial Opera House as Angelique, in 'Le Domino Noir,' preparatory to entering upon her engagement at the Comic Opera. It was a great evening for her. The public overwhelmed her with applause, and called her out repeatedly. Nor were her comrades less friendly and demonstrative. On entering her dressing-room, she found it festively decked out; and, at the conclusion of the opera, the members of the company assembled on the stage, and Herr Walter, after making a spirited speech, handed Miss Minnie, in his own name and that of his colleagues, a splendid wreath. On the ribbon which tied it were the names of the donors.

WHILE the duration of the lives of many of the chief actors of the American Revolution, civil and military, was longer than the average, the reverse seems to be true of those most prominently connected with the war of the rebellion. Of the eight persons represented in Carpenter's celebrated emancipation proclamation, only two—Gideon Welles and Montgomery Blair—survive. Lincoln, Stanton, Bates, Caleb B. Smith, Seward and Chase have passed away. Only two of them—Bates and Seward—had reached over three score years and ten, while the others were considerably below the allotted span. When it is recollected that the scene depicted occurred in 1862—less than eleven years ago—the rapid movement of the destroyer will be more clearly seen.

Suicide of Forgers.

ST. LOUIS, May 9.—The Democrat's Keokuk special says: A man named Wallingford and his wife, who lived near Bonaparte, committed suicide last night to evade punishment for forging deeds and other documents by which they obtained large sums of money. A letter left by Wallingford discloses the names of other parties engaged with them in committing the forgeries, and who received part of the money obtained. These parties have disappeared, but search is being made for them, and if found, they will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

MISS LYDIA TRENT, a Somerset maiden of one and a half score of years, eloped one night last week with a fellow by the name of John Keiter, an uncommonly homely, double grass widower—and this is the latest sensation in Somerset.

The committee appointed by the Council to procure two more ex-policemen, have made arrangements with two of the police of Pittsburgh. In the meantime the gas is be lit by old "daddy."

THE Warren Mail says: "A man was arrested at Bethel, on Saturday, on suspicion of being implicated in the killing of the little girl Mess, near Saltsburg. He was taken before Justice Farrel, West Middlesex, but there being no evidence, which in his judgment was sufficient to hold him, he was discharged. He very closely answered the description of one of the men, and manifested great uneasiness, whenever the affair was spoken of in his presence."

ON Wednesday afternoon last, the frame dwelling-house situated on the farm of Mr. Joseph Robeson, in Frankstown township, Blair county, was discovered to be on fire. Efforts were immediately made to subdue the flames, and at one time it was thought that but little damage would be done to the building, but unfortunately the water was some distance from the house, and before a sufficient quantity could be obtained, the flames gained such headway that further efforts to save the building were abandoned. All the furniture was saved, but the house was entirely consumed.

THE survivors of the Eighty-fifth regiment of Pennsylvania volunteers, will hold their first annual re-union at Uniontown, Pa., May 29th and 30th, 1873. This regiment was raised at Uniontown, and was composed of companies recruited in the counties of Washington, Greene, Fayette and Somerset. The regiment was, during nearly the whole term of three years, engaged in active service, participating in McClellan's Peninsula Campaign in 1862, in the siege of Charleston, S. C., in 1863, and Grant's campaign against Richmond, in the spring and fall of 1864. The regiment was reduced in numbers to about two hundred and twenty-five men, and was mustered out of service at Pittsburgh, Pa., November 22, 1864. The object in the call for this meeting is to effect a permanent organization of the survivors, and they are all earnestly requested to be present.

THE Johnstown Tribune of Saturday contains one of those sickening tales of horror that for the credit of humanity do not occur very often: A little girl named Heckman, daughter of a farmer residing in Yoder township, Cambria county, and aged only nine years, was out in the woods a short distance from her father's residence, in company with a young companion, daughter of a neighbor, Saturday morning, when a man named Elisha Dickson happened along in the vicinity. It is said that he enticed the little girl Heckman away some distance from the other, under the pretence of showing her some young goats, and when he got her far enough that her outcries could not be heard he brutally outraged her. After committing the dreadful crime he fled, and his victim managed to make her way to the house of Mrs. Fowen, when that lady, on hearing her story, immediately went to town and made information against Dickson, the alleged perpetrator. He was arrested and placed in the lock-up, and was to have a hearing before Justice Strayer Saturday evening.

The Lungs--Consumption.

The importance of early treatment in lung diseases by some who has given the matter a special and separate attention daily, becomes more and more apparent. The cures made by Dr. Keyser, of this city, in some of the most hopeless cases of consumption, entitles him to the most distinguished consideration in that important branch of the healing art, the Doctor's recent improvements, not only in the remedies used, but in the increased facilities which he has brought into requisition, are such as afford hope for a cure, after all other ordinary means had been apparently exhausted. His Lung Cure, in the language of an editor of this city is invaluable, and whilst it is curing, at the same time supports nature and renews life.

The Doctor's office is at 167 Liberty street, adjoining his Medicine Store, or at his residence, 120 Penn street. A treatise on Consumption sent free by mail whenever ordered.

DAILY GAZETTE.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

OFFICE OF THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE, SATURDAY, May 10, 1873.

The money market on Saturday was excessively dull for this season of the year, and the dealings in stocks were unusually restricted. Our banks have means enough at command to meet all claims, and the general feeling among all classes is one of confidence in the present and near future. There was very little improvement manifested in local securities. Transactions in real estate were quite limited, but there was some little improvement over the early part of the week. We confidently look for a brisk business being done in this respect during the next few days, should the weather continue favorable. In New York money was easy at 6@7 per cent., on call, with exceptions at 4@5 per cent., and gold ranged from 117¾@118¾.

George B. Hill & Co., Bankers, No. 58 Fourth avenue, furnishes the following quotations of bonds and stocks from his latest advices by telegraph:

Saturday's Philadelphia Press says the money market was abundantly supplied throughout Friday, and 7 per cent. was the ex.reme rate for its use, while the bulk of operations were made at 6. Long-time contracts ruled at 7@8, and contracts on the leading shares at 8@9. Government bonds were firm and prices were generally higher, the registered bonds advancing ¼@¾. The local stock market was dull and inactive, except for Pennsylvania railroad, of which 6,450 shares and allotments sold at 54¾@54¾ for the former and 53¾@54 for the latter.

Friday's Boston Post says: Perhaps the first unmistakable symptoms of returning ease in money this Spring, in thisllocality, were noticeable last week—there was then comparatively little difficulty attendant on borrowing, at the old rates. Now, there is more of tangibility in this sort of thing, quotations for call loans and discounts, except for depositors, who find no fault with 7 per cent., showing a slight reduction. "Minute money" to individuals, on A 1 collaterals, to-day 7 per cent; to banks, 6, with some propositions to take at 5 per cent "get along without." 4 months' notes are passed at about 8, a few exceptions at a fraction below 8, and many at 8½, while we also hear of well-known parties now offering 9, and lenders, knowing that they are almost constantly engaged in immense speculations, claiming that they ought, under the circumstances to pay 10, especially if there is a good chance for a handsome profit to the borrower after deducting this figure.

The Chicago Tribune of Friday says: the "only noticeable change in the local money market today was the advance in the price of New York for remittances of New York funds having increased in the last few days, and the amount of exchange making against shipments of products is small yet. Sales were made between banks as high as ¼ per $1,000 premium. The extremely dismal weather of the last two or three days not only interferes with trade in the city, but with the marketing and planting of crops in the country. In the grain markets, this view of the case caused a rise in all the principal grades. The great bulk of the wheat planting has, however, been done already, and the wet spring is not likely to hurt it. In this way we had a similar wet, cold, back ward spring, and yet the yield of wheat that year was larger than usual. The quality was somewhat against so-called, but it nearly all inspected as No. 2."

Saturday's Cincinnati Gazette has the following: Business was quiet in local financial circles yesterday; perhaps the weather had something to do with it, and the desire to attend the Musical Festival still more; the demand for money at the leading discount houses was fair, and rates ranged from 6@8 per cent. between the banks and their depositors. The income from maturing paper and from deposits being on a reasonable scale, there was no improvement in the means of the banks, while the supply of currency was scarcely more than necessary for a comfortable working basis for business. In the open market there was a liberal supply of prime paper, and nearly all of it was negotiated at 10 per cent. and under, transactions above this figure being exceptional.

It is now only three weeks before the fifty millions of 5 20 bonds of 1865, called in by the Treasury, cease to bear interest. This sum of fifty millions is all for which the syndicate subscribed of the funded loan 6 per cent. bonds, although they have the option of taking 250 millions more before the 1st of December next, the present prospect for their doing so is not brilliant, for the money markets of Europe are not in a favorable condition to sell our 5 per cents, there is at par and above in this country they can be bought in the open market at about 2 per cent. less than par in gold. The syndicate are allowed to report 50 millions to-day, and prime 1150 as these have for some weeks ruled in the market 2@3 per cent under par in coin, they will make a handsome profit besides the regular commission, even if they do not sell the new 6ives at par.

The New York Bank statement for the week is as follows:

Loans, increase	3,996,800
Specie, decrease	1,581,800
Legal tenders, increase net	1,537,400
Deposits, increase net	6,346,200
Circulation, decrease	40,900

NEW YORK, May 10, 1873.

Money was easy at 6 to 7 on call, with exceptions at 4 and 5. Sterling was strong on the day. Leading bankers, apprehensive of trouble on the continent, advanced the rates to 8@8¾ for sixty days and 10@¾ for sight. Gold was active and higher, advancing to 118¾, closing 118¾. Loans 4 to 6 for carrying. Clearings $61,000,000. The Assistant Treasurer disbursed $2,3.0,000, on account of interest and bonds, and received $6,700,000. Government closed at one at the highest in coupons, and the bonds were steady. The advices from Vienna relative to the panic on the Stock Exchange gave a weak tone to the market, and a general movement to realize was inaugurated. A general decline in prices of from ¼@¾ per cent. was the result, the market closing weak at about the lowest figures. The Vienna crisis was local in character, and grew out of speculation in stocks, and was promptly passed on the market by the Rothschilds. Private advices state that the military were called out and the Bourse closed for three days. This afternoon the German exchanges were reopened, and reports from the other side that a depression existed at Frankfort and Amsterdam.

PITTSBURGH MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE, SATURDAY, May 10, 1873.

The general market continues dull, and trade is still reported unsatisfactory, but it is hoped and expected that there will soon be a change for the better. The demand for all of the leading staples is very light, being restricted entirely to supplying immediate requirements, while in regard to prices, there have been, since our last report, no important changes.

APPLES—In steady demand with sales at $2.50 to $3.50 per barrel for common to good, and $4@4.50 for prime to choice.

APPLE BUTTER—10@15 cents per gallon.

BEANS—$1.90@2.25 per bushel.

BEESWAX—Prime at 32@33 cents per lb.

BUTTER—The market, under the influence of increased receipts, is weaker, but there is no quotable change in prices; 25 to 26c for good to prime, and 30 for choice. Low grade butter is exceedingly dull.

CARBON OILS—Quotable at 16½@16¾ by the carload, 17@c additional for smaller lots.

CHEESE—New Ohio Dairy, 11@12; new Ohio Factory, 14@15; prime old New York Goshen, 16½@17.

CANNED GOODS—Peaches, 3 lb. cans, $3@3.25; Winslow's Corn, $1; other brands, $2.75; Tomatoes, $2.75@3.00.

COUNTRY BACON—Shoulders, 6@7; Clear Sides, 8@9; Hams, 10@12. Country Lard, 8@9c.

CRANBERRIES—10@13 per barrel.

DRIED FRUIT—Peaches dull and nominal at 6@6½c for halves; little or no demand for quarters or mixed at any price. Apples 3½@4½.

Blackberries, 10@12.

EGGS—The market was reported firmer today, and we advance our quotations to 15@16c; but few sellers under 16, and some few thought early in the day of holding at 17.

FLOUR—Trade continues quiet, although in the aggregate there is a fair business, and prices are well sustained. We continue former quotations, Spring wheat flours, $7.50@8, the outside figure for choice. Minnesotas; and $8.50@9 for red winter wheat. Rye Flour, $4.50@5.

GRAIN—There is a fair demand for Wheat, and with continued light receipts and offerings it is firm but unchanged; the mills are taking all the red that offers at $1.80@1.85 for good to choice white. No. 1 may be quoted at $1.85@1.90. Oats quoted steady at 42@43c, and some dealers are holding prime white at 50. The stock of Corn, both new and shelled, is very much reduced, but as the demand is restricted prices remain unchanged. We quote by the immediate wants of feeders, there is not much inquiry for it. Shelled may be quoted at 56@58—we are cognizant of no sales at these past few days at 56. There seems to be no inquiry whatever for Barley, and in view of the unsatisfactory condition of the whisky trade, and in the absence of sales, we continue to quote at 80@85. The supply of Rye is limited, 90@95. There is some inquiry for Barley, and no stock except what is in hands of consumers; prices however, are nominally unchanged.

GROCERIES—There is a moderate inquiry for the leading staples, but our merchants continue to report trade as being very dull for this season of the year; however, it is hoped and expected that there will soon be a change for the better. Sugars and Coffees are quoted firm under the influence of the advices from the east, and a further advance, soon, is not improbable.

COFFEE—Choice Rio, 24; good to Prime, 22½@23¼c. Old Government Java, 31c; other Javas, 26@28c. Roasted Rio, 15 packages, 23c. Roasted Java, 28c.

HAY—The receipts of baled seem to be falling off again, but the supply is still in excess of the demand, and prices remain unchanged, ranging from $25 to $30, according to quality and condition.

HOMINY—$4@4.25 per barrel.

MAPLE SYRUP—Sales at $1.30@1.40 for gallon jugs. Maple Sugar, 14, granulated, and 10@16 in cakes.

PETROLEUM MARKET.

OFFICE OF THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE, SATURDAY, May 10, 1873.

The Crude market has been dull and offish during the entire week, although prices, as compared with this day week, have not varied much, not over 10c per bbl; quoted steady to-day at $3.50@3.60 per bbl at Parker—Review Line—equal to about 6¾@7c per gallon delivered here. Refiners here are buying very sparingly as they expect prices to recede, and it is said that consumers generally are pursuing the same course; if this is true, it seems strange that prices are so well maintained, as in that event the supply would increase rapidly in first hands, and as is generally the case under similar circumstances, some of the producers would be obliged to realize in order to raise funds. Producers still allege that the production is steadily falling off, and on this and this alone, they rest their hopes for better prices, and there is no denying, providing it is true, that it is a good solid basis.

Refined has been very quiet all week, indeed we might say for several weeks past, or since the advance, but there is little or no change to make in quotations; the Refiners Association decline to sell futures, and it is difficult to state in which way they propose to move the market, but it is expected that it will be upward. Quotable at 16¼@16¾ on cars here; 19¾ for April delivery in Philadelphia, and 20¾ for June.

PITTSBURGH LIVE STOCK MARKET

CENTRAL STOCK YARDS, EAST LIBERTY, SATURDAY, May 10, 1873.

The following is a statement of the receipts of the stock during the week, and in order to afford a comparison, we append those of the week preceding also:

	This week.	Last week.
Cattle.	815	638 cars.
Hogs.	2500	155 "
Sheep.	60	48 "
Horses.	44	52 "
Mules.	12	2 "
Total	851	895 "

CATTLE.

While there is no improvement whatever in prices, nor is it expected that there will be for some days to come, yet there was evidently a better feeling manifested to-day, caused by the fact that the bulk of the stock has either been sold or shipped out, and as the arrivals at Chicago have been much lighter than last week, the feeling is gaining ground that the glut, both there and here is over for the present. It is probable, however, that both New York and Philadelphia will be overstocked again next week, as the shipments to both of those markets are known to have been large, hence, dealers do not expect anything very encouraging from either of these points until after that date, as then we will probably require another week; there were something over one hundred cars shipped from here alone to Philadelphia, while of the balance of the supply on sale, a goodly number were taken by country buyers, of which there was an unusually large steadiness, and there was also a moderate inquiry for New York. However, for all of the week was a hard one all week for sellers, as it was expected last Saturday would be, and we have not the slightest doubt but what the majority of them lost money, some of them a good deal of it as cattle here, as in New York, have generally been sold for just about what they cost in the country, perhaps less. There has been a decline of from 50c to one dollar per hundred during the week within the last two weeks, and during the same time the shipping here has been from 50 to 75c, equal to $@$ per head, and about $100 per car. The fact that trade has been so exceedingly light recently creates the impression that the shipments during this week or two will be comparatively light, and this is the principal reason for the prevalence of a better feeling, and it remains this alone, if the "ball" struck should be anything like what it has been during the past two weeks, prices would undoubtedly be forced still lower, as already stated, the probability is that the western dealers will hold off for a time in order to give the leading markets an opportunity to recuperate.

So far as we could learn, there were no sales this week above 6¾, but extra 1400@1500 shipping steers may be quoted at 6¾@6¾; 1300@1400 do, 6@6¼; good 1200@1300, 5¾@5¾. Prime Texas Bulls, 3@5c. Stock cattle were in better demand and sell quicker and at relatively better prices than fat cattle; prime thrifty stock steers 900@1000 lbs weight, fairly quotable at 5¼@5¾; and 700@800 lbs. at 4½@5.

SHEEP.

The arrivals, as will be seen, were somewhat in excess of those of last week, but with an increased demand, the market has ruled active and strong all week at an advance of fully 20@25c per cwt., and closes to-day with but one or two cars unsold; the sales of the week footed up about 11,000 head against 9,000 last week. The improvement was caused by the increased demand from New York, about one-third, if not more, of the entire supply having been purchased for shipment to that point; the Philadelphia shippers had hoped to be able to buy at a decline, but instead of this they were obliged, in consequence of the stormy competition on the part of the Yorkers, to pay an advance. Last week, the Philadelphians were able to outbid the Yorkers, but this week the tables were completely turned, very fortunately for sellers. Quotations may be fairly given as follows; prime corn fed, fine wool, 9½@10; 2s, 9¼@9½c, although there were no sales above 9¾@9¾c, and but few at those figures, but, we presume, it would require a more to a scarcity of the right kind of stock than want of higher prices; 2s, corn fed, 8¾@9c; 5½ Wooled sheep, to use a common phrase, are almost played out; may be quoted at 6@7c for common to extra.

HOGS.

The receipts, as will be seen, were unusually large, and with scarcely any active demand, the market has ruled sluggish all week, and when as compared with Monday, are considerably lower. Prices to-day, that is difficult to say, whether it was in favor of the buyer or seller; some dealers thought one thing and others another; there was but little doing in the early part of the meantime was small, that they might be able to sort the prices slightly on Monday, but we are inclined to the belief that there will not be much change either way during the next 48 hours. Prime heavy hogs, usually denominated Philadelphia hogs, may be fairly quoted at 5¾@5¾; good mixed hogs at 5¼@5.50, and fair to prime Yorkers 5.25@5.35.

Wool Markets.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The Shipping List says: There is no perceptible change to note in the market; the demand is perhaps less active, but prices are fully sustained. New Texas is arriving only in small quantities; the quality is said to be very fair, and holders are asking 25@30 cents. No new California is as yet come forward, but it is understood that considerable quantities are on the way consigned to manufacturers direct. Foreign is in rather better request at previous prices. The supply of fleeces and pulled is, at the moment, very light. Sales of city weekly fleece is not expected for at least a month to come; this cold spell of weather, together with the heavy rains that have visited all parts of the country, has greatly retarded shearing; consequently, by the time of the first arrivals, the stock of old, it is thought, will be very nearly exhausted. The sales of the past three days comprise 12 000 lbs. Cape at 35@37½c; 2-4@3; 7 bales Texas, 31; 50,000 lbs do, 37½@38c; 30 lbs. unwashed, 33@34; 9,000 lbs. heavy fleece, 40@41; 5,000 lbs. State do, 40@42; 3 bales low spring California, 20; 39 do Pall do., 19; 39 do fine do., 18½; 200,000 lbs. Montevideo, 3,000 lbs. Mestizo pulled, 45,000 lbs. washed fleece, 5,000 lbs. unwashed fleece, 10,000 lbs mixed do., 4,000 lbs. Ohio do., 10,000 lbs. western do., 128 bales spring California, and 50,000 pounds Pall do. on private terms.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—There is no material change to note in the market or demand. Sales making, including Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia XX and above at 43@45c; X, long clothing, three quarter and half blood, 34@35c; coarse, common and medium, 32@33c; blood, 42@43c; Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Missouri, fine and fine medium, 25@44c; coarse, 40@42. Combing Wool —medium washed combing 46c; medium unwashed combing, 45c; coarse washed combing, 42c; coarse unwashed combing 43c. Unwashed Delaine Wool—Fine unwashed 33@36c; medium unwashed 30@32c; coarse unwashed, 28@30c. Pulled washed Wool—Choice tub-washed 50@55c; fair washed 46@48c; inferior do washed, 40@42c. Pulled Wool—Philadelphia and country super Pulled 42@45c; Philadelphia and country merino and extra, 40@42c; western and country pulled 42@44c; western merino and extra pulled 40@42c.

BOSTON, May 8.—There has been considerable activity in the Wool market the past week, and with favorable advices from abroad, manufacturers have been free purchasers at full last week's prices, and on desirable grades of fleece an advance of 1@2½c per lb. has been obtained. Foreign is held with more firmness, and prices are evidently touched the lowest point for the present.

Iron Markets.

NEW YORK, May 9—The Iron Age says: The general demand for American Iron continues light, which, together with the decline in Scotch Iron, has unsettled the market a trifle, and outside lots are obtainable at a reduction from late figures. The Lehigh companies, however, continue firm in their views and positively refuse to sell No. 1 Iron below $56, and that figure is still the asking price of holders here, and what a buyer would probably have to pay, should a lot be thrown in the market, it is doubtful if it could be realized over $54 to fact, a lot of 200 tons No. 1 Allentown sold in this way at that figure. No. 2 Iron is also quiet and obtainable from outside sources at lower figures. Forge Iron without material change. We quote No. 1 at $48@50; No. 2, $46@48; and Gray Forge, $40@42. The market for manufactured Iron continues quiet, and though no quotable change has taken place, still prices are weak, with indications of a decline in the near future.

BIRMINGHAM, April 24.—Business was again restricted to-day by the high prices which were asked for all kinds of finished iron. Quotations in the majority of cases remain unchanged since quarter day. The ironmasters are generally full of orders, and are not open to sell under any pressure or at any abatement. The demand for hoops, scrip and angles is well sustained, although it is known that many orders are held over in the hope of a fall. Shipping continues on account of the United States are below the average this spring, but the colonial inquiry for galvanized sheets is well sustained in spite of high rates. There has been an advance in best sheets ranging from 20@30s per ton. The Welsh ironsheet mills are less busy than for two years back. Full rods of good quality are £14 10s per ton. There is no change in quotations for pig iron, best brands of all mine hot air ranging from 47 1s 6d@48. The stocks of pig have been increased during the past fortnight. It is believed that there will be a decline in coal shortly. There is a diminished demand for iron-making. Cannock Chase coal, loaded into trucks at 9s 6d@10s 6d per ton. Ironstone is in well sustained demand.—London News.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—Pig Iron is dull but prices are without material change. Sales of No. 1 foundry at 50; and No. 2 at 45@46. Bar is quiet at 4 4-10c per lb, and Nails firm at 5.25 per keg.

Iron Making at Beaver Falls.

As shown in last number, Brighton had fallen to a low estate under the general prostration of business in the country, and it remained in this forsaken and neglected condition until during the year 1829. Mr. Ormsby still owned it, not being able to find a purchaser. The timber had become very scarce and too dear to make charcoal at a cost to enable them to compete with furnaces in the pine country up the Allegheny river, and the iron works were consequently rendered of but little value. At that time, there were no furnaces in this country which made iron from bituminous coal, or other mineral coals. It is quite interesting to draw a comparison between the mode of making iron from pig at that time, and as it is now made. The change from the monotonous, dull stroke of the hammar that prepared the bars for use, that of the modern appliances of a well-fitted rolling mill of to-day, exhibits, in a marked manner, the strides made in industrial arts. Those old worthies never dreamed, probably, that in the course of a few years, the labor required to make a few tons of iron would turn out hundreds of tons of the best marketable iron. Eat Brighton was destined to see better days. A cloud hung over her, and her hopes and aspirations for the future, though now so far from ever being realized, so far as man could see, were now about to be realized to the full, and the cloud to burst in blessings. In the Summer of 1829, Mr. James Patterson of Philadelphia, then lately from England, while looking over Western Pennsylvania, for a site upon which to locate and embark in the manufacture of iron, learned that the Brighton property, water power, iron works, &c., were for sale, and visited the place. He visited Mr. Ormsby and bought the property, after thoroughly inspecting it. He got possession of it and held it only after the most vexatious and troublesome hindrances and obstacles, and which, though for a time seemingly put to rest, gave Mr. Patterson an immense amount of trouble for many years afterward. Indeed, his experience alone, is a history of itself. This purchase had an immediate effect for good throughout the entire valley. The people took new heart and set to work to better their fortunes under the new turn of affairs. A commencement was at once made by the new owner to rebuild and improve the place.

Manufacturing Revived.

A new canal-race and lock of sufficient size to pass to and fro canal boats, equal to any part of the Penna. canal, was built, to render more available the water power. A large merchant flour mill was erected and put into operation with abundant success. A cotton factory, with machinery for spinning coarse yarns, was also put in active work; cotton yarn, which he had spun east of the mountains, was woven and made into plaids, ginghams, checks, &c. A large cooper shop was built, and many coopers employed to make flour barrels, and quite a number of dwelling houses were built of frame, brick and stone. Of course there was plenty of employment for a large number of men, women, boys and girls, scattered throughout the neighborhood around. The flour mill had a capacity of two hundred barrels per day, much of which was shipped to Philadelphia by way of Pittsburgh. Boats for this trade were owned and used by Mr. Patterson to bring wheat to the mill from the Ohio river, and from the valleys north by the canal, which could pass the locks to the mill, unload the grain, and carry away a load of flour. Coal banks were opened, and miners put to work mining it out. Quite a trade in wool was established by which it was carried to Philadelphia, the farmers receiving cash for all their wool. During this great prosperity, it was always the rule at the works to engage the working people for cash payments. They received their pay at stated times, and in turn found merchants for their payments.

In addition to the various works of Mr. Patterson, there was erected by Mr. Archibald Robertson, in 1831, a paper mill, which for a number of years made the printing, writing paper and wall paper, and gave employment to quite a number of people. A few years afterwards this mill was rendered useless by a part of it being burned down. Specimens of these letters were made on a yellow writing paper, manufactured by Mr. Robertson about forty years ago. It bears well its age, and is a very creditable specimen of writing paper though a little coarse. It was presented to the writer by Mr. Robertson, whose acquaintance he had the pleasure of enjoying for some years. Mr. Robertson was honored, in his lifetime, with high positions of trust in government at home and among his neighbors his name is held in the highest esteem, and his memory cherished for his kindness of heart and the purity of his motives. For about fifteen years after the purchase of the Brighton property by Mr. Patterson, the town was in the enjoyment of the most unbounded prosperity, until the great fire in Pittsburgh in 1845, when a severe back-set was given to the enterprise started, Mr. Patterson being a very heavy loser.

Blighted Hopes.

In 1849, Mr. Robertson established another paper mill in the upper portion of the town, which is yet in full operation, and very prosperous under the management of Messrs. Frazer, Metzger & Co. In the year 1852, a company was formed and organized under a charter obtained from the Pennsylvania Legislature, under the name of the Beaver County Manufacturing Company, which purchased the Brighton property, and raised the people's hopes and expectations that they at last would greatly improve the property, and much advance their own and the country's best interests. But, under unwise management, the company ignominiously failed, and left the people to themselves or any one else. During the time which they held the property a large dwelling house was burned down and the cotton factory with all its machinery was totally destroyed by fire. After this gallant efforts were made to induce eastern manufacturers and others to purchase the property and erect large works upon it, but from various causes all failed of success. Among these causes was undoubtedly the local influence used to drive away capitalists.

The last great effort was made after the destruction of Harper's Ferry National Armory, in endeavoring to induce the National Government to buy the property, with its water power, for a national foundry and armory, but this was defeated by certain local jealousies and envy, which finally resulted in that great prize being located at Rock Island. For some years Brighton was not known in the outside busy world, except as a very quiet and pleasantly-situated town. Its paper mill was in operation, the flouring mill was run and a soap and candle factory was also doing some business. It had not even the advantage of a postoffice or a railroad station, those two conveniences being located two miles off, in the borough of New Brighton.

The Past and Present.

One minute's walk from the center of the town carried one into the quiet of the beautiful woods that partially surrounded it. The old "Mansion House" was the most commodious and probably the finest dwelling house in town. The little old red brick school house, standing on an eminence and commanding a complete view of the town, was ample for school, religious and lyceum purposes. Venerable sires taught their children that once Brighton was the greatest of all the towns, and sons listened, listening to the story of the bright pictures of the past, bravely declared that her future should surpass even the greatest prosperity of the past. The broad green valley in its beauty smiled a welcome to all strangers who trod upon it, and the request soon became an urgent one, that once again men of capital should rise in their might and restore the town to its primitive glory and greatness.

So it remained until about the year 1866, when strange rumors began to float on the current of public conversation. Many were the tingling proceedings that were taking place in the town. Men began to talk of factories, cutleries, large business houses. A smile overspread the faces of the owners of clay lands, and the brick makers were at peace with the world—and chimneys.

A petition brought the postoffice, and pride marked the happy faces of the Brightonians, when they read on their envelope the unmistakable post-mark of their own postoffice. A station was the occasion of joy, and people had no longer to tread the weary path to the depot across the river, that they might get to the outer world.

The town began to increase and business to look up—all of which, however, will be told in the story of Beaver Falls. These signs and wonders in the quiet town were, after all, only the forerunners of the booming Beaver Falls, which, with its wealth and industry, and intense business activity and energy, very soon transformed the peaceful little town into a busy, grasping, aggressive little city. A Physician Sued.

Saturday morning, the heirs at law of J. H. Hodder, deceased, entered suit in the District Court against Dr. J. D. Schooley, of Braddock's Fields for mal-practice, laying their damages at $10,000. The plaintiffs allege that the deceased was injured in a cooper shop, his foot being partially crushed, and that Dr. Schooley attended him. The physician it is alleged bandaged the foot so tightly that the patient's suffering were increased, the circulation stopped, and mortification influced, which resulted in the death of the patient. The case will come up for trial at the next term of Court.

A Taste For Music.

Early yesterday morning, two men found acting rather suspiciously around a stable were arrested by officers Tippett and Moran, and taken to the Central lock-up, where they gave their names as F. Cramer and John Worcel. On making a search of the stable where the men were captured, three accordeons were found, two of them in boxes and one wrapped in a newspaper. The property is supposed to have been stolen from some music store. The men were placed in a cell and the charge of larceny preferred against them. They will have a hearing before the Mayor this morning.

A South Side Candidate.

From present appearances it would seem that we are to have plenty of good material from which to select our Representatives for a sojourn at Harrisburg next winter. The latest "Richmond in the field" is Mr. A. C. Hays, Councilman from the Twenty-ninth ward. Mr. Hays, coming from the South Side, has peculiar claims for favor. He is thoroughly identified with the interests of that section, and has a habit of attending thoroughly to any business entrusted to him. Boys and girls, scattered throughout the neighborhood around. The flour mill had a capacity of two hundred barrels per day, much of which was shipped to Philadelphia by way of Pittsburgh. Boats for this trade were owned and used by Mr. Patterson to bring wheat to the mill from the Ohio river, and from the valleys north by the canal, which could pass the locks to the mill, unload the grain, and carry away a load of flour. A Beautiful Spring Stock.

All these spring days Messrs. Moorhouse & Carsten have been filling their establishment, corner Fourth avenue and Market street, with a very complete and varied assortment of Dry Goods and general Fancy Goods for ladies. The fortune of this firm is so high that it will be a sufficient endorsement of them, to say that the firm congratulate themselves upon having the freshest, fullest and most complete assortment of Spring Goods that they have offered to the public before. They are marking most of it at special bargains, they are ready to divide the profit with customers. They are making a specialty of Dress Goods, Silks, Alpacas, Mohairs, Barèges, Grenadines, &c., &c., all of which a particular attention is invited—both as to price and quality. Ladies should not forget, when out shopping, to call at Moorhouse & Carsten's.

Nearly Smothered to Death.

A man named Jasper Pelkey, of Wilkinsburg, stopping at the St. Nicholas Hotel, went to bed on Saturday night and did not get up on yesterday to go to his meals. In the evening some one went to his room in order to have it fixed up and put in order for the night. The door not being opened by the occupant of the room, some anxiety was occasioned and the door broken open. Pelkey was found in a comatose condition, lying upon the bed. His insensibility was occasioned by coal gas. It is supposed that he blew it out, as it was partly turned on and escaping. But how a man would live nearly hours in a room impregnated with gas is more than a marvel. Dr. T. S. Arthurs was summoned, and with great difficulty resuscitated him. The doctor stated it would not have taken much longer to entirely suffocate him.

A "Red Man" Complimented.

Among the following chiefs of the red men who were in conclave at Titusville last week, was a well known Pittsburgher, Mr. John Rehman, who is one of the Past Grand Sachems, is now Great Prophet, and for ded the subject of a pleasant personal sketch in the Courier as follows: "The subject of this sketch, John Rehman, Great Prophet, is a bright ornament to the order. He is a genial, high-minded gentleman, generous and warm-hearted. He is universally loved by his brothers in the order, and is highly esteemed by all who knew him, or with whom he has business relations. He is the retiring Great Sachem, Brother Clymer succeeding him. He was adopted in Tribe No. 15, Pittsburgh. He afterwards withdrew from 15 and connected himself with 58, of Allegheny, in which tribe he was made a Past Sachem. He has passed regularly through all the chairs of the Great Council, and retired to the Great Prophet's Stump on Wednesday last. He resides in Allegheny City, and is a ware merchant, and is forty-seven years of age. He is married and has a large family of children. "Cheer John," may you live long and prosper."

A TERRIBLE DEATH.

A Man Has His Head Cut Off by Being Run Over by a Train on the Fort Wayne Road.—A Warning to Track Walkers.

Coroner West yesterday held an inquest on the body of Evan Evans, who was killed by the Leetsdale accommodation about seven o'clock on Saturday evening, near Superior Station. From the testimony adduced, it appears that the man was walking on the south track of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad, and on nearing the station, a train approaching, he stepped on the north track to avoid it, immediately in front of the accommodation. The engineer saw him and whistled, but it was too late. He reversed his engine, but the man was struck by the locomotive and thrown under the train, his head being severed from his body, the headless trunk clinging to one of the cars and being dragged a considerable distance and horribly mutilated. The jury rendered a verdict of "accidental death." Deceased was employed at the Superior Furnaces. He was a native of Wales, age sixty-four years and a widower. He has two grown up sons living in Birmingham.

RELIGIOUS.

Special Services in the Churches Yesterday.

The genial influences of pleasant weather yesterday and last evening, very noticeably affected the attendance at the churches, and the occupants of the pulpits were very generally greeted with large—and as the occasion was favorable for a display of the spring costumes it might not be amiss to say—fashionable audiences. The bright appearance of nature served another purpose too, a sort of double office, first to increase the list of attendants to hear, and next as a convenient and apposite illustration with which to point a moral and adorn a discourse, and in this latter sense, was not forgotten by those who expounded the truth.

In one or two of the churches there were special services held, chief perhaps among which was the meeting held in the interest of at Christ Church in the evening. That was attended by a very large audience which filled all the pews and the temporary seating in the aisles,—the large turnout being in some degree the result of the closing of several other churches for the express purpose of allowing the membership of them an opportunity to hear something further of the Alliance. The gathering was conspicuous also not only in respect to its size, but from the fact that nearly every Protestant denomination was represented,—both in the pulpit and in the pews, and the proceedings seemed to be infused with a refreshing spirit of fraternity.

The exercises were commenced about half past seven o'clock. Felix R. Brunot, Esq., presiding. The opening devotional services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Jacobus. Rev. Mr. Harrison and Rev. Dr. Hall, which the President introduced Rev. Dr. I. C. Pershing, who made the first address, talking about twenty minutes and discussing the reason why the church had not come up fully to its privileges in the way of success. The reason, according to the speaker, being that there was not that fullness of spiritual unction that there should be—a little too much of denominationalism, and not enough of unity on the essentials. The speaker hailed the Evangelical Alliance movement as the harbinger of better things and the sure presage of unlimited future success.

Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., of New York, and Honorary Secretary of the American Branch of the Evangelical Alliance, was next introduced, and made quite an interesting and practical address, in which he observed that the object of the Alliance was two-fold. First, it was organized for the purpose of concentrating the sentiment of the Christian world upon such movements either of a [illegible] or humanitari an character, regarding [illegible] relief to the sufferings [illegible] the Gospel. The spi[illegible] of cases where [illegible] ceived with governmen[illegible] lief for the oppressed, [illegible] of evangelization. Sch[illegible] alliance was also [illegible] on the basis of faith in th[illegible] timentalism a sympathet[illegible] bring the churches into clos[illegible] would unite an influence [illegible] without denominationalism[illegible] good. Such an union would [illegible] life in all the churches; its [illegible] been felt in Europe and the [illegible] denominations were represented [illegible] the Alliance there, as [illegible] been the case in America.

The speaker developed this pe[illegible] and then gave an account of the [illegible] Alliance in Paris in 1846—a [illegible] Conference meetings that had be[illegible] which representatives from all the c[illegible] discussed, and planned for Christian [illegible] from which a reviving influence [illegible] through all the churches, and finally [illegible] the features of what was [illegible] for the American gathering, which, [illegible] were that this gathering [illegible] New York next October; to be [illegible] some of the most eminent divines in Europe as well as America; will continue in session [illegible] ten days, during which there will be discussed the various methods of Christian work; and finally will cost $30,000, a very small sum in comparison to the good to be accomplished.

The address was a very earnest and lucid statement of the aim of the Alliance and was well received by the audience.

It was followed by the lifting of the collection and then

Rev. J. H. W. Stuckenberg in a brief address, delivered by request, reviewed the salient features of the religious legislation of Germany, giving much information that was fresh and interesting on the subject, after which the meeting adjourned with the benediction by the Rev. Dr. Hunter.

THE EPISCOPAL HOME FOR ORPHANS.

Another of the more interesting services held in the churches last evening, was the anniversary of the Episcopal Orphan's Home, held at St. Peter's church, on Grant street. The occasion attracted to this elegant edifice a very large and a very much interested audience, and the exercises were of a character to repay all who were in attendance.

Shortly before 8 o'clock, hour appointed for the opening of the exercises, the children from the Home, numbering about forty six, entered and were seated down in front of the altar, the seats in front reserved for them, the sight awakening the liveliest feeling of interest and sympathy among those who had gathered. The services in a few minutes commenced, and the order of the programme was preceded by some very fine music from the choir. After the opening devotional exercises, a friend of the institution in the congregation addressed the Rev. Dr. Hall, who presided on the occasion, and the gentleman was accordingly chosen. The reports of the officers of the Society were then presented and read. That of the Secretary was read by the Rev. Dr. Coster, and in it the affairs of the Home for the year was fully detailed. The most interesting item mentioned, perhaps, was the fact that the number of inmates in the Home during the year, though depleted during the year, through the removal of some of the Soldiers' orphans who had attained the age of sixteen years, and through the removal of other orphans who had been provided with comfortable homes, by the kind families interested in their welfare. The report further set forth that there were forty-six orphans in the Home at present, sixteen of whom were the children of soldiers' children.

The report of the Treasurer was read by the Rev. Dr. Scarborough, showing in round numbers that the receipts for the year had been a little over $8,400, and the expenditures $7,900, leaving a balance in the treasury of $517.

After this the children sang in inimitable style several of their exquisite songs, and the Rev. Dr. Hall followed with an address to the children and the congregation, of a very touching and impressive character.

At the conclusion of the sermon a collection for the benefit of the Home was taken up, and a very creditable sum received.

The officers and managers for the ensuing year, with Mrs. Scull as President, were then elected, and the exercises were concluded with prayer and benediction.

THE LOCK-UP ON SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Drunks, Disorderlies, etc.—The Mayor's Sunday Hearing.

Last Saturday night at the Central lock-up was unusually dull up to twelve o'clock, at that time only nineteen prisoners and a crazy woman were confined in its Andersonville like precincts. But after that hour a steady stream of drunks and disorderlies commenced to pour in. The first one coming in after that hour was Mrs. John James, she came over from a South Side precinct where they have no lock-up. Mrs. James was unable to navigate, so the "Berkshire" express, (a wheelbarrow) was procured, and officer B. Hoffmeister rolled her in to the prison pen. Mrs. James' husband was also in the lock-up on the charge of being drunk and his wife, who had just been brought in, tried to interpose in his behalf, which to night-captain Ramsay, that her husband and she were sober. Next came in William Mitchell. William was sober, but he had gone into a house in Arthur's court and insulted the inmates. They asked his arrest, which was accomplished. William left ten dollars for his appearance next morning, which he forfeited. He offered the keepers the best drink they ever saw if they'd keep his name out of the papers, but the drink was not a strong enough inducement. Ah! here comes another. Elizabeth Young. Eliza is tag well known in police circles to need any comment. It is the same old charge, drunk and disorderly. Thus they kept on coming till forty-four drunken wretches were huddled together once more in the horrid den. The Mayor disposed of them yesterday morning. Many of them paid their fines, and, with aching heads and empty purses, departed homewards to seek repose, or get on another drunk. Maggie Clinefelter, for persistently engaging in getting drunk and disturbing the public peace, was retired to Claremont for six months; Eliza-beth Young, for the same offence, was sent four months, while Hugh Harper and James Adair were retired for thirty days each.

Important to the Commissioners who have the Improvement of Streets in Charge.

We understand that Messrs. O'Neil & Flinn, the well known contractors, have purchased the right, for this city, of the Wyckoff wood pavement. The claims of the Wyckoff wood pavement, in brief may be stated thus:

1. It is stronger, and more durable than any other wood pavement. 2. It is smoother, and makes a better drive. 3. It is more simple in construction, and therefore less liable to slip in driving over it than on the other wood pavements in use. It is furthermore claimed that the Wyckoff wood pavement has been in use five years in the city of Elmira, N. Y., and has not required repairing. It will be remembered that O'Neil & Flinn laid the Wyckoff pavement last year on Collins avenue, East Liberty, on Sarah street, in Birmingham, and also in Temperanceville, where it has been subject to more severe travel than any other wood pavement in the city, and in every instance the Wyckoff has sustained these severe tests in a manner that excites universal commendation.

To day Messrs. O'Neil and Flinn will begin to lay a sample of the Wyckoff wood pavement at the corner of Fifth avenue and Grant street, when they would respectfully invite the Commissioners elected to pave the various avenues to be present, and examine the method of construction.

Amusements.

PITTSBURGH OPERA HOUSE.—This evening Mr. Charles Walcot an actor of distinguished merit, will appear in a new play by Chas. Foster entitled the "Swamp Angels" enacting the character of "Henderson," a reporter. This play is founded on the adventures of Lowery and his gang of notorious outlaws of North Carolina. The play is said to be of thrilling interest and considerable literary merit, its production everywhere having caused a genuine sensation. It will no doubt draw crowded houses during its performance here. The scenery and appointments prepared for the play are all new.

TRIMBLE'S VARIETIES. — For this evening Messrs. Gardner and Trimble have provided a rare treat for their patrons in the German dialect actor, Mr. George W. Thompson, who will appear in his speciality of "Yacup." Besides this attraction, the Vaudeville Company is retained and will render a choice variety programme previous to the drama.

HER STORY.

The Case of Samuel Williams—The Woman in the Case—She Tells of the Correspondence—Pleasant Journeys and all Expenses Paid.

Renewed interest in the case of Samuel Williams, the young post-office clerk, now on trial in the United States District Court, was awakened by the announcement of the romantic association of a young lady with Samuel's career, and the court room was pretty well filled, Saturday morning, when the examination of witnesses was resumed; the lobby was crowded, and the space inside the bar pretty well taken up, indicating that there was

A MORE GENERAL INTEREST

In the proceedings than had been manifested at any time previous. The case went on promptly, when after a recall of one or two witnesses to restate facts heretofore mentioned in connection with the disappearance of the letters from the post-office, and the mutilation of others, Mr. J. M. Reardon was put on the stand, and testified that he was in the bank at Sharon, and that the books showed the following deposits in favor of the prisoner: December, $100; February, $50; March, $50; April, $50; May 15th, $200; May 24th, $100; June 11th, $50; June 17th, $62 50—total, $652 50, all of which had been drawn out except $2 50.

The next witness called was the lady in the case—Miss Lottie H. Stevens, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, who stepped forward to the stand and calmly proceeded to give her testimony. She spoke very slowly, and distinctly, so that before she had answered the first question the spectators had an opportunity to form their opinions. She is quite young, about twenty years of age, and would be generally considered handsome. Her countenance rather prepossessing, the witness in her favor and her demeanor, though not that of a forward girl, was yet of a character to indicate that she regretted her unenviable position. She was very neatly dressed in a suit of black. Her story, in connected form was in this wise. "I reside at Bridgeport, Conn. I know the defendant; have known him for two years; made his acquaintance through a correspondence through the Waverly Magazine; I inserted a notice, and he replied to it; first saw him in June, 1872, at the Jackson at the Judge he was to call on me at New York; did not see him; he invited me to go to a ball at Boston, by telegraph; went to the ball with him; next saw him on his way to Sing Sing to school, was in New York; I paid no bill in Boston; stopped at a hotel; returned from Boston to New York on the boat; he got my ticket; was him next on Thanksgiving day; told me he had been at Long Branch; I received a good letter, and plain from him; they were sent to me by express; I also received [illegible] a registered [illegible] from him; [illegible] to come by express; I also received [illegible] from him; [illegible] to come by express; I also received [illegible] from him; [illegible] to come by express; I also received
